"Let your light shine" Matthew 5:16

Last week we were bringing history to life through rich drama workshops and hands-on experiences, helping children step into the past and truly understand the world they learn so much about. This approach is exactly why we think so carefully about our trips and visitors and why we've made recent changes to ensure every opportunity is purposeful and impactful.

Last week also saw TKAT Forest School event, hosted at the Junior school - an inspiring day of outdoor learning that you can see captured on our Instagram page.

We're looking forward to welcoming Feathers and Furs to the Infants next week, giving children the chance to encounter real animals as part of their learning journey. These moments of immersive and meaningful exploration help our children deepen their understanding and experience different forums to "let their light shine."

There was very little take up for the school workshops mentioned in the previous bulletin. We will give another week for people to indicate their interest. If the numbers stay as they are, we will consider providing leaflets on the most popular topics.

Next week is Children's Mental Health Week and we will be extending this across two weeks. This is so that children have the time and space to engage in meaningful activities and thoughtful Collective Worship discussions. Our focus will be "My Place" the official theme. The guided Collective Worship PowerPoint will be available on the website in the coming weeks and we will highlight this once it is live. Throughout the fortnight, children will explore their sense of place in the world, reflect on belonging and consider how these experiences shape the way we feel and think. We will be linking this to perseverance, while being mindful that perseverance looks different for every child. For many, especially those with mental health conditions or who are neurodivergent, emotional wellbeing requires a range of supports; not simply trying harder. Our aim is to create an environment that recognises and respects these differences so every child feels understood, valued and supported. Please do continue these conversations at home if you have the capacity to do so.

Reminder: It's Fish and Chips on Thursday 12th February

We hope you had a lovely weekend!
